SITUATION SUMMARY

Oroville Dam Auxiliary Spillway Incident

On 02/12/17 at 1603 hours the California State Warning Center (CSWC) received notification from the Department of Water Resources (DWR) automated line that the Oroville Dam was in failure status due to extreme scouring of the auxiliary spillway. The CSWC are made notifications according to SOP. All down stream warning points were notified.

Per the DWR Flood Operations Center and California Data Exchange Center (CDEC) as of 02/17/17 at 0600 hours:

- Current releases from Oroville Dam (80,000 cfs) are within the downstream channel capacities in the Feather River.
- Inflows are at 23,000 cfs. substantially less than the outflow releases.
- The lake elevation has dropped below 861.47 feet as result, no water is flowing over the auxiliary emergency spillway.
- The target is to drop the elevation at Lake Oroville to 851 feet by 02/18/17
- The plan to prevent further erosion utilizes trucks, helicopters, and hand crews to move large rocks and gravel to fill holes in the emergency spillway.

Activations

- The Cal OES State Operations Center (SOC) activated at Level 4 in support of the Oroville Dam Incident
- The Department of Water Resources (DWR) Department Operations Center (DOC) has relocated to the SOC
- The DWR Flood Operations Center (FOC)
- Caltrans Headquarters EOC is activated at Level 1
- PG&E EOC
- Butte EOC
- Sacramento County EOC

Key Points

Today

- The first in the series of storm systems will continue to move east and south across the southern Sierra and southern CA today along with strong winds continuing into the afternoon

Friday

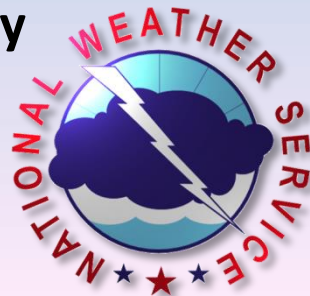

- The second and strongest storm will be more widespread across the state, with the greatest impacts expected from heavy rainfall, mountain snows and strong winds across southern CA

Saturday

- Thunderstorms will be possible across southern CA Saturday

Sunday-Wednesday

- Additional storm systems will occur early next week, generally across central and northern CA

Key Impacts

- Minor to moderate flooding along unregulated rivers, streams, roadways, and low-lying areas continues, and will have additional inflow Today-Saturday and again Monday-Wednesday next week.
- Heavy snow will cause hazardous travel over Sierra passes with travel delays likely today and Friday into Saturday, and again Monday through Wednesday next week.
- Winds will be strong enough to potentially create some tree damage and areas of power outages across the north through this afternoon and especially across Southern CA Friday into Friday Night.
- Rockslides and mudslides possible, and even likely in Southern CA along mountain slopes and steep grades during and following periods of heavy rainfall, especially Friday into Friday Night.
- Debris flows are also possible over burn scars with periods of brief heavy rain (greater than 0.50" per hour), especially Friday into Friday night across southern CA

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- A wet pattern has returned to Northern California. Several systems will move through the area into Tuesday, with the wettest storm expected Monday and Tuesday. Recent storms have left the region highly vulnerable, so amplified impacts will be possible with additional rainfall.
- A powerful storm system is expected to bring very heavy rainfall to Southwest California Friday Into Friday evening, potentially the most significant storm of the season, especially for Santa Barbara County southward. Very heavy rain is likely Friday into Friday evening. Rainfall estimates are 2-6 inches for coasts and valleys and 5-10 inches for south facing foothills and coastal mountain slopes focused from the Santa Barbara South Coast southward.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

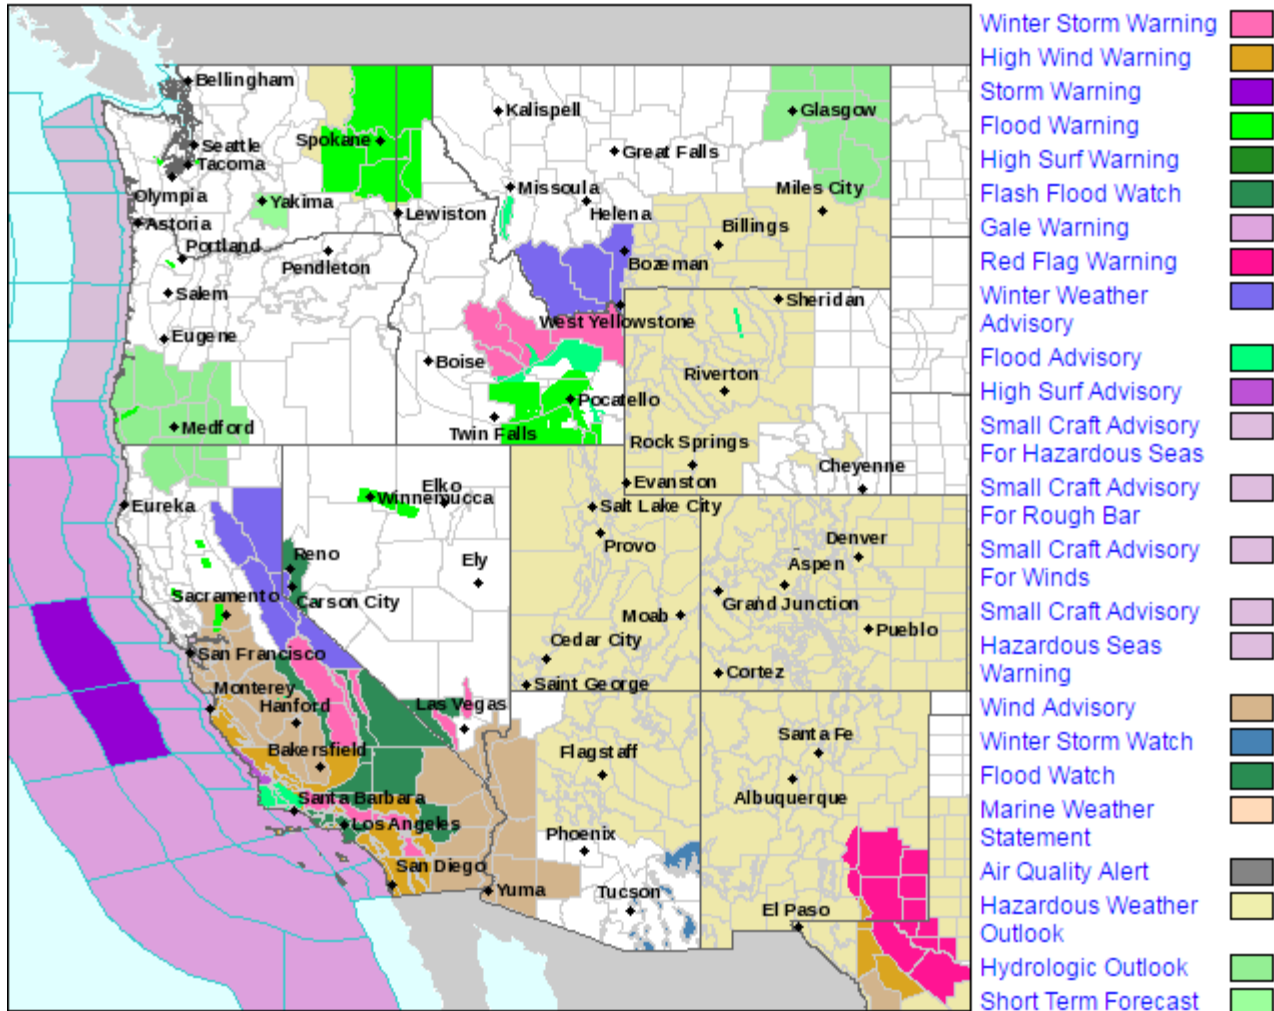

Wet Unsettled Weather to Continue for the Next 7-10 Days

The current storm passing through Northern California is producing strong gusty winds and moderate to heavy precipitation. Many areas are seeing gusts of 35-45 mph, and the most wind-prone mountain spots have had gusts above 70 mph. Snow levels will fall as the main cold front moves through, to 4000 feet in the north and 5500 feet in the south. Winds and precipitation will drop off rapidly after sunset this evening. After a brief break tonight another storm system will move into Central CA early Friday. Rain and high elevation snow will spread north across Northern California during the day on Friday. The heaviest precipitation will be from Plumas and Mendocino Counties south, with snow levels 6000-7000 feet. Showers will continue on Saturday with snow levels dropping to 4000-5500 feet. A colder system on Sunday will produce a few snow showers in the northern mountains. A fourth system similar to the current one will move in Monday and a fifth Tuesday night and Wednesday. Colder systems are expected to drop in from the north next Thursday or Friday into the weekend and produce scattered light precipitation with lower snow levels.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A series of Pacific storms will bring periods of rain to the region through the end of next week. The only break in the rainfall region wide looks to be Sunday. The first storm will be weak with showers spreading across Central California this morning and into Southern California this evening. Most of Central California will receive between a quarter inch and an inch of rainfall, while most of Southern California receives less than a quarter inch of rainfall with this first storm. A second storm will bring heavy rain to the area Friday with scattered showers Saturday. It still looks as though most foothill and mountain locations will receive between 4 and 8 inches of rainfall and most coastal and valley locations will receive between 2 and 4 inches of rainfall with this second storm. The snow level will be above 8,000 feet through Friday and then drop to around 6,000 feet Friday night and Saturday. South to west winds of 15 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas through tonight and then increase to 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph Friday morning through Friday night. It will be windy across the entire area Friday. Winds will become light on Saturday. A third storm will bring a period of rain and then scattered showers Sunday night through Tuesday and a fourth storm will bring more precipitation to the region Wednesday and Thursday. At this time, it looks as though the third and fourth storms will bring heavy rainfall to Central California, but only light amounts of rainfall to Southern California. Temperatures will be around 5 degrees above normal today, with upper 40s and 50s across the mountains and mid 60s to mid 70s in the valleys. Temperatures will be near to a little below normal Friday through the end of next week.
